Peter Reddaway, a veteran scholar of Soviet and Russian politics, is professor of political science and international affairs at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. He is the author of many articles and books on Soviet political protest, including Uncensored Russia: The Human Rights Movement in the Soviet Union. From 1986 to 1989, Professor Reddaway was director of the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies. He was a distinguished fellow at the U.S. Institute of Peace in 1993–94.

Dmitri Glinski Vassiliev is a senior research associate at the Russian Academy of Sciences' Institute of World Economy and International Relations in Moscow, from which he recently obtained his doctorate in history. He has published several articles on Russian domestic and foreign policy, and was formerly an active member of Russia's democratic movement.

United States Institute of Peace

The United States Institute of Peace is an independent, nonpartisan federal institution created by Congress to promote research, education, and training on the peaceful management and resolution of international conflicts. Established in 1984, the Institute meets its congressional mandate through an array of programs, including research grants, fellowships, professional training, education programs from high school through graduate school, conferences and workshops, library services, and publications. The Institute's Board of Directors is appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate.

Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace

This book is a fine example of the work produced by senior fellows in the Jennings Randolph fellowship program of the United States Institute of Peace. As part of the statute establishing the Institute, Congress envisioned a program that would appoint "scholars and leaders of peace from the United States and abroad to pursue scholarly inquiry and other appropriate forms of communication on international peace and conflict resolution." The program was named after Senator Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, whose efforts over four decades helped to establish the Institute.

Since 1987, the Jennings Randolph Program has played a key role in the Institute's effort to build a national center of research, dialogue, and education on critical problems of conflict and peace. More than a hundred senior fellows from some thirty nations have carried out projects on the sources and nature of violent international conflict and the ways such conflict can be peacefully managed or resolved. Fellows come from a wide variety of academic and other professional backgrounds. They conduct research at the Institute and participate in the Institute's outreach activities to policymakers, the academic community, and the American public.

Each year approximately fifteen senior fellows are in residence at the Institute. Fellowship recipients are selected by the Institute's board of directors in a competitive process. For further information on the program, or to receive an application form, please contact the program staff at (202) 457-1700.
