David S. Yost is a professor of international relations at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, California. He worked in the Department of Defense, primarily in the Office of Net Assessment, during 1984–86, under the auspices of a fellowship from the Council on Foreign Relations. He has been a fellow at the Smithsonian Institution, a visiting scholar at Johns Hopkins University; a Fulbright fellow in Paris; and a visiting professor and research associate at the Centre des Hautes Études de l'Armement, École Militaire, Paris. He has written extensively on international security issues, particularly with regard to France, Europe, NATO, and U.S. foreign and defense policy. His publications include Soviet Ballistic Missile Defense and the Western Alliance (Harvard University Press), and monographs such as France's Deterrent Posture and Security in Europe (International Institute for Strategic Studies) and Alternative Structures of European Security (Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars). Professor Yost conducted research for this book while serving as a senior fellow in the Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace at the United States Institute of Peace during 1996–97.

UNITED STATES INSTITUTE OF PEACE

The United States Institute of Peace is an independent, nonpartisan federal institution created by Congress to promote research, education, and training on the peaceful resolution of international conflicts. JENNINGS RANDOLPH PROGRAM FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

This book is a fine example of the work produced by senior fellows in the Jennings Randolph fellowship program of the United States Institute of Peace. As part of the statute establishing the Institute, Congress envisioned a program that would appoint “scholars and leaders of peace from the United States and abroad to pursue scholarly inquiry and other appropriate forms of communication on international peace and conflict resolution.” The program was named after Senator Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, whose efforts over four decades helped to establish the Institute.

Since 1987, the Jennings Randolph Program has played a key role in the Institute’s effort to build a national center of research, dialogue, and education on critical problems of conflict and peace. More than a hundred senior fellows from some thirty nations have carried out projects on the sources and nature of violent international conflict and the ways such conflict can be peacefully managed or resolved. Fellows come from a wide variety of academic and other professional backgrounds. They conduct research at the Institute and participate in the Institute’s outreach activities to policymakers, the academic community, and the American public.

Each year approximately fifteen senior fellows are in residence at the Institute. Fellowship recipients are selected by the Institute’s board of directors in a competitive process. For further information on the program, or to receive an application form, please contact the program staff at (202) 457-1700.
