Adnan Abu-Odeh was a senator in the Jordanian National Assembly from 1998 until March 1999, when he was appointed political adviser to King Abdullah II. He had previously served as Jordan's permanent representative to the United Nations, minister of information, chief of the Royal Court, and political adviser to King Hussain. He is a fellow at the Center for International Affairs at Harvard University and was a Senior Fellow at the United States Institute of Peace in 1995-96. He is a former fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and is a member of the Arab Thought Forum (Amman). He is also a member of the CSIS International Consultative Group on the Middle East. Abu-Odeh is the author of several English-language articles on the Middle East peace process, including "Two Capitals in an Undivided Jerusalem" in Foreign Affairs (spring 1992) and "Bridging the Gap of Peace in the Middle East" in the Journal of Palestine Studies.

UNITED STATES INSTITUTE OF PEACE

The United States Institute of Peace is an independent, nonpartisan federal institution created by Congress to promote research, education, and training on the peaceful resolution of international conflicts. Established in 1984, the Institute meets its congressional mandate through an array of programs, including research grants, fellowships, professional training programs, conferences and workshops, library services, publications, and other educational activities. The Institute's Board of Directors is appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate.

JENNINGS RANDOLPH PROGRAM FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

This book is a fine example of the work produced by senior fellows in the Jennings Randolph fellowship program of the United States Institute of Peace. As part of the statute establishing the Institute, Congress envisioned a program that would appoint “scholars and leaders of peace from the United States and abroad to pursue scholarly inquiry and other appropriate forms of communication on international peace and conflict resolution.” The program was named after Senator Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, whose efforts over four decades helped to establish the Institute.

Since 1987, the Jennings Randolph Program has played a key role in the Institute’s efforts to build a national center of research, dialogue, and education on critical problems of conflict and peace. More than a hundred senior fellows from some thirty nations have carried out projects on the sources and nature of violent international conflict and the ways such conflict can be peacefully managed or resolved. Fellows come from a wide variety of academic and other professional backgrounds. They conduct research at the Institute and participate in the Institute’s outreach activities to policymakers, the academic community, and the American public.

Each year approximately fifteen senior fellows are in residence at the Institute. Fellowship recipients are selected by the Institute’s board of directors in a competitive process. For further information on the program, or to receive an application form, please contact the program staff at (202) 457-1700.
